

Myriam Moscona

Born in Mexico City in 1955, of Bulgarian Sephardic descent, Myriam Moscona is possibly the most important poet writing in Ladino today. She currently lives in Mexico City. Moscona is the author of nine books, including Tela de sevoya (Random House Mondadori, 2012) a hybrid narrative that weaves together memory and fiction; the backdrop to the book is Moscona's family language, Ladino, or Judeo-Spanish.
